Teams have more talent and experience, operating flexibility than individual performers. So why do so many teams either struggle unpleasantly toward an unsatisfactory conclusion-or, worse, crash and burn shortly after launch? J. Richard Hackman, one of the world's leading experts on group and organizational behavior, argues that the answer to this puzzle is rooted in flawed thinking about team leadership. It is not a leader's management style that determines how well a team performs, but how well a leader designs and supports a team so that members can manage themselves.

Access Free Primed Perform Build Highest

According to Hackman, cookie-cutter formulas and prescribed leadership styles

In Leading Teams, he identifies the key conditions that any leader can put in place to increase the likelihood of team success—regardless of his or her personality or preferred style of operating. Through extensive research and compelling examples ranging from orchestras to economic analysts to airline cockpit crews, Hackman identifies five conditions that set the stage for great performances: a real team, a compelling direction, an enabling team structure, a supportive organizational context, and the availability of competent

- builds shared commitment, skills, and task-appropriate coordination strategies;
- helps members troubleshoot problems and spot emerging opportunities; and

Experts estimate that as many as 98,000 people die in any given year from medical errors that occur in hospitals. That's more than die from motor vehicle accidents, breast cancer, or AIDS--three causes that receive far more public attention. Indeed, more people die annually from medication

Instead, this book sets forth a national agenda--with state and local implications--for reducing medical errors and improving patient safety through the design of a safer health system. This volume reveals the often startling statistics of medical error and the

A key theme is that legitimate liability concerns discourage reporting of errors--which begs the question, "How can we learn from our
