For dan ranks, the first five are colored black, 6th, 7th, and 8th dan have alternating red and white panels (dandara), and for 9th, 10th dan and above, the belts are solid red. In judo's promotion system as originally finalized by Kanō around 1926 there was no maximal dan rank, and judoka holding 10th dan would normally wear a red belt, but also could wear a white belt, the same color as the lowest kyū rank.

Red, White, and Black: The Peoples of Early North America In its current edition, this is political propaganda masquerading as history. Don't know about the early editions. Contrived, tedious, and I would argue, unsubstantiated, claims about how "climate change" impacted the fortunes of native America in the pre-historic era, are just one example of how Nash has rewritten history to r
